When asked why he serves on the board of directors, AIA Colorado South 2011 President Lou Galletta, AIA, explained, "Serving as AIA Colorado South 2010 President-Elect made me aware of the many outside organizations within our community who want to make a difference and who look to AIA for knowledge, leadership and action. As I consider the 2011 board, I am enthusiastic about the level of passion and expertise we have assembled, and about the strategic alliances we will be forging with our planning, governmental and educational colleagues. I look forward to working collaboratively with this group and the larger AIA membership to continue the efforts from past boards and to further position AIA as the go-to organization on matters pertaining to design and the built environment. The board looks forward to bringing the membership enhanced value through quality programs that are cutting-edge and relevant to their practices. We look forward to working with AIA Colorado in the area of advocacy to maintain and enhance the value of a professional license to practice architecture in Colorado."

About AIA & AIA Colorado South

For more than 150 years, members of The American Institute of Architects (AIA) have worked with each other and their communities to create more valuable, healthy, secure and sustainable buildings and cityscapes. AIA members have access to the right people, knowledge and tools to create better design, and through such resources and access, they help clients and communities make their visions real. AIA Colorado South is one of four chapters within the AIA Colorado component. This chapter is comprised of members from 18 counties in south and southeastern Colorado and includes the cities of Colorado Springs, Alamosa, Pueblo and La Junta.
